The Department of National Museum and Monuments

The Department of National Museum and Monuments (DNMM) also known as the Botswana National Museum, was established by the National Museum and Art Gallery Act of 1967. It was initially administered by a board appointed by the Minister of Labour and Home Affairs.

It was opened to the public in 1968 as a private institution and depended on a grant from Government as well as aid from donor organizations to operate. The period between 1967 and 1975 saw rapid growth and development of the museum which necessitated stable funding.

As a result, the institution was taken over by the Government in 1976. It is currently under the Ministry of Environment, Wildlife and Tourism.

VISION

"We, the Botswana National Museum, will be a model institution in the provision of a sustainable cultural and natural heritage service."

MISSION

"The Botswana National Museum exists to protect, preserve and promote Botswana's cultural and natural heritage for sustainable utilization thereof by collecting, researching, conserving and exhibiting for public education and appreciation".

OPERATIONS

The Botswana National Museum has a myriad of specialist disciplines including; archaeology, heritage management, zoology, geology, botany, education, anthropology and history. It is through the work of professionals in these areas that it carries out its mandate of protecting, conserving, researching, collecting and disseminating information on Botswana's heritage.

The Botswana National Museum currently houses a collection of over 8000 ethnographic artifacts which represent cultures from across Botswana and Africa. There is also a historical collection comprising artifacts from the colonial era to the present. The historical collection stands at 3284 items. These artifacts are preserved through a process that entails careful examination and treatment in order to avert deterioration due to factors such as changes in temperature, humidity and chemicals in the air. The artifact are also documented and catalogued for ease of reference.

The institution facilitates lifelong learning, understanding and appreciation of Botswana's heritage through public programmes which include: Mobile Museum (Pitse ya Naga mo Maotwaneng), guided tours of exhibitions and monuments, Motswedi Wa Ditso radio programme and a publication called the Zebra's Voice.
